Published by ATKINSON & ALEXANDER, No. 53 Market street, north side, four doors below Second street, at $2 per annum, payable half yearly in advance, or $3 at the end of the year.

Fritten on hearing the mild doctrine of the So-ciety of Friends preached by a lady from the state of Indiana.

Say who is she with spirit meek, Beaming from eyes of mildest light, We see no anger flush her cheek, Tho' zealots would her precepts blight.

Whose bosom awells with ardent prayer,
Whose heart responds with Christian love,
And every thought that's cherished there
Must emanate from light above.

Tis one arrayed in Heavenly vest, Whose shield and mission are divine, Proclaiming peace to every breast
That humbly seeks a Saviour's shrine.

She teaches us by truth's bright ray, With hope inspiring call, God gave his only son away A ransom for us all.

The vilest may repent and live, Relying on his promise, That he a Heavenly home will give When earth is fleeting from us. Thou need not at Jerusalem dwell,

Or worship on the mountain, Nor wash in elemental well-Thy heart, Oh man's the fountain 'Tis there He will a temple seek, And there his will make known. There sweet consoling comfort speak, When worldly friends have flown.

How soft the music of her tongue As thus she calls to Heaven— Sweet as the tidings shepherd's sung, Sinners may be forgiven.

SPRING.

Yow the bright the rosy morning Purples from you eastern dawn, All the szure sky adorning, Shedding light o'er every lawn.

Now the winter's fury slackens, Vernal mildness spreads around, Now creation's face awakens From its slumbers late profound.

Touch'd by Spring's reviving powers, Now the trees their tendrils show; Moisten'd by refreshing showers, Soon their buds and foliage grow.

Now a matted turf encloses
Alt the ground with verdant green,
B auteous libes fairest roses,
Every where are gaily seen.

Blessed songsters, sweetly singing, Raise their accents, strain their tongues, Ail the air is constant ringing With the music of their songs.

Pearly runnels, ever flowing,
B done o'er the painted sand,
where the zephyes gently blowing,
Temper all the heated land.

Oh! thou Spring of sacred treasures, Why so fleet is thy career? Tares still with all the pleasures. I could see thee all the year

LINES.

Oh, will no arm the injured save,

No voice bid dark oppression cease?
Oh, must the life blood of the brave Crimson the snowy robe of peace?

Sweet peace, that spreads her gentle wing, And look with eye of weeping midness, Whose soul, bath'd in celestial spring,

Is all unused to scenes of wildness But yet if mad ambition will Persist in deeds of wrong and pain, Come rest thee here, sweet nymph, until The smiling of thy endless reign.

Tyrants why shrink ye from the light,
Why threat'ning shake the chains of slavery
Tis vain—'tis vain, your deeds of night,

Must yield to freedom, truth and bravery. Truth waves her flag to freedom's sky, And spreads her banners to the wind.
Behold! the powers of darkness fly
Before the "mighty march of Mind!"

Advance but now your trembling hosts,
The' usher'd by the thunders roar,
Touch but the right high freedom boasts,
Your doom is fix'd—you rise no more.

Pass not the Pyrences!—the hand That check'd of old the tyran's way, Is strong and just as when the band Of Egypt o'er the waters lay.

The flame of truth shall beighter burn, And virtue speak in boder toness, Back like a flood shall wisdom turn, And overwhelm your tottering thrones

Who is the "God of Louis"—say,
Whom thus your trembling souls invoke?
Beware! Despots!—beware that day
The God of heaven your deeds provoke!

ON A MANIAC.

His glance is wild and raving, it bespecks

The ruins of resoul sublinely great;

The flush of fever burns upon his checks,

And the blood rushing with uneven gait

Along his dark blue veins, to frenzy urging

The week of nature, then it scarcely creeps;

Now like the sea o'er broken masses surging;

Then like a breathless like all stilly shorts. Then like a breathless lake all stilly sleeps.
Oh, such was not the man that once I knew,
When pleasure's mantle knew no stain from wo When plea-ure's mantle knew no stain from woe; When joy's bright sky of love inspiring blue, With thousand lights for him was in a glow. But while the sun of Hope was gaily beaming, Lost love, a cloud of darkest his arone; And frenzy now like lurid lightning, gleaming, Is all the feeling that his bosom knows.

These verses are addressed to my beloved friend W. P. P. P. POR THE SATURDAY EVENING POST.

TO SATIRE.

Oh thou, whose gimblet my can pierce the soul, Whose voice, whose looks e'en folly can control Whose thundering accents ringing in the ear, Can make the self-determined deaf man hear; se face the scold will silence keep

The immediate man will blush, the unfeeling and weep;
Otten, where Charity in vain hath prayed.
To the cold heart of Avarice, for aid, To the coid pears of Average, for aid,
Thou hast unlocked his stores, more has he given,
For fear of thee, than he would give for beaven :
Oft from hypocrisy thy hand hath torn,
The goodly character that he had worn,
And to the opened eyes of men revealed,
The inate wickedness he had concealed:
(h) this is satire as it curely to be The inace weareness he had concealed:
Oh! this is satire as it ought to be,
Pirm in its judgments and from passions free;
But there are satirists who only see
The face, and not the soul's deformity;
Thus if these writers criticise, they scan,
Not if the author executes his plan,
Not if fair Genius o'er his labours smile,

Not it fair Genus o'er his labours smile, with wisdom's fruit to cheer, while its bright flowers beguile;
No they still turn their sharp unwestried eye,
To find some term uneouth, or word awry;
On this they work their pens, and sometimes make A dose that may the author's calmness break;
But such a dose ne'er does the natient road. But such a dose ne'er does the patient good, It only tends to hatred and ill blood. P. P. P.

AN EPISTLE OF TENDER CAUTION Against stumbling at the Faults of others.

It has been the work of the restless adversary of human happiness in all ages of the world, to strive to keep man in, or bring him into darkness. Those who are in it he strives to keep in it; and those who have been redeemed in some degree from it, he strives to captivate and beguile into it again; and his design in both, is to prevent the enjoyment of the sweet flowings of the love of God, and the powerful communication of the Holy Ghost. For he knows that these enjoyments are only witnessed in the light. He also knows the light would shine, and even prevail to the letting the sout into the full fruition of those divine enjoyments, if he did not with all his might, strive to propagate the kingdom and power of darkness in and over people's minds.

Now the stratagems he makes use of are many and diverse; one of which, and that not the least, it has been pressingly on my mind to write a few lines upon, by way of caution to such as are desirous to land safe at last, in the mansions of undisturbed felicity; but it feels or has felt difficult to express my mind, so as to have my words go to the right place, and do good. . I have no desire to write one word on this occasion, but what may be of use, and tendto a rength-en those desires and strivings, which the Lord of hosts delights in, and which as they prevail, his blessing is unto Therefore, I de sire that all prejudice may be laid aside, and my words weighed in that balance that ever is accompanied with a just weight; and tried by that car that trieth words, as the mouth tastes meat. I know the subtlety of Satan is such that he will be apt to supply the carping mind with materials to overthrow the force of all the persuasions and arguments and exhortations that the sincerest goodwill can dictate, or the greatest yearnings of bowels, and travail of spirit for the welfare of souls, inspire. However, if the Lord shall please to impress the following on any mind to advantage, to Him be the praise;

if not, with him I leave it. The particular snare of the adversary. that my mind is engaged to guard, caution, and encourage against, is this, stumbling at the failings of others. A potent engine, a powerful instrument which prevails by Satan's influence to the weakening the faith of many. But, alas! alas! why will a spirit bound to eternity, stumble over the failings of flesh and blood? Why will a soul, that must finally settle accounts between God and itself, spend time, waste time, to muse and despond at the infirmities of another The frailties of a thousand, cannot impair the unchangeable Truth and righteousness of Jehovah. The hypocrisy of ten thousands cannot deprive the faithful, persevering soul, of the all-sufficient assistance of the mighty God of Jacob. It is an everlasting truth, that there is a right way to serve God; and the' a multitude fall on the right hand; and an host of those who have been as stars in the firmament, revolt on the left -- yet the wayfaring man, tho' a fool, cannot err in that way which the Lord hath cast up for the ransomed to walk in. We are told that the dragon's tail drew a third part of the very stars from heaven. Was this told, to stumble us? Surely nay ;-but still the cry is, Come up hither, and I will show thee the bride, the Lamb's wife. Now the stumbler may say, "I have strove to see the bride, I have thought I had seen her. I have viewed her, and her beauty fades away; her brightness disappears. ma k well, the call is " Come up hither, and I will show thee." It is not while we stand gazing it imperfections, and reasoning upon faults, that we must expect this divine prospect. No, no. But come up hither, and I will show thee the bride, the Lamb's wife. This come up hither, imports something very different from that of halting, lingering behind, as it were, sticking in the mire, which my soul has truly mourned over and lamented. I think I am a living witness, and car testify that there are some who have long gree of the sweetness of his love, who are yet far behind hand with their day's work, the food, to all eternity, of such as spend all the days of their fives in gazing at, or stumbling over the failings of others. But I mean not to censure. Tis their immortal souis' welfare I have in view; therefore, I would call them; yea, beseech, and intreat them, as they tender their own salvation. to come away, come away. This is no your rest. It surely is polluted. It is a land of darkness, as darkness itself: the shadows of the evening, yea the shadows of midnight are spread over the minds of the inhabitants thereof. Oh, sorrowful! sorrowful! that any should love to dwel in utter darkness! that any should suffer their immortal souls to be made so easy a prey to the Dragon. What will it avail thee, O soul, when thou comest before the great and final tribunal, to say such a man professed great sanctity, but was an hypocrite; therefore I was tempted to quit the service of the living God, and serve his enemy? Or, such a one made professio-of exalted piety, but was a liar, a deceiver an abominable wretch 1 therefore, I was somewhat washed, I turned to my waflow-ing in the mire. This will never justify ling in the mire. This will never justify there at the gates of heaven, nor product there an admittance thereinto. Oh! my soul mourns on the account. My spirit is indeed grieved. Come, let me query with thee—Dost thou feel a daily arriving to overcome evil in the self a daily arriving to overcome evil in the self and thou constantly concerned to keep up the inward match and holy was fare! Yea, let me come closer: Whilst thou are dwelling, mutting, and feeding upon the faults of musing, and feeding upon the faults of others, art thou at the same time engaged, and panting after perfection in thy own soul? While thou art renearing to thy intimate friend, the wanderings and weaknesses of such and such, dost thou feel longing, and unquenchable desires in thy mind, to make war in righteousness against the power of corruption in thyself? If not the enemy of Truth, it is to be leared, may with justice, challenge the praise due from thy complainings. Oh! that that eye was open in thee, that could see thyself. Oh! that thou hadst a heart to understand this mystery of iniquity. But also I the adversary blinds thee. For why dost thou give back, because of another's weakness, but because of thine own? Why stumblest thou at another's frailties, but because thy self art frail? Make a page then, and turn thy attention inward. Set a watch upon the wicket of thy soul, and keep pension! tinel in deep attention there; then wilt thou have enough to do to view thy own imperfections, and to guard against them, so as not to stumble others. Work enough indeed may be found to engage all thy are and diligence, in laboring to cease from wil and do good thyself.

to give the victory over our own soulsto our enemy, because others are entangled in his snares. Shall I quit the field, aid turn my back in the day of battle, because a fellow-soldier is treacherous, cowardit or unfaithful, when I know my all is stake, and if I flee, I must perish? Surel nay. I ought rather to put forward wit more zeal, vigilance and constancy; en deavoring to encourage the fearful and un believing; as knowing the salvation their souls, as well as my own, is at stake Away then, thou reasoner! thou murme er! with such pitiful musings and excus es. The day of solemn reckoning draw the Ancient of Days, to give an account of the deeds done in thy frail, mortal body; be the effect of Divine vengeance, which is and to receive a reward according to thy a principle as false at that which Jesus works; not according to the stability of another. Therefore, awake thou that sleep est, and arise from the dead, that Christ may give thee light. For darkness, gros darkness, is the encircling, overshadowig canopy of thy soul. It is time for theete hear and obey the command given to Isacl of old ;-to go forward ;-for thou (ith them) hast compassed this mountain beg enough ;-a barren mountain, in the /ide desolate wilderness; from the top of wich it is much to be feared, thou mayer day (or rather night) by the arisin of a strong and boisterous whirlwind, bewept off into the bottomless pit of despr; or into some quagmire, or swamp hole, where scipents, reptiles and vomous creatures breed and dwell. Of that I could persuade thee, for thy oy soul's sake, to turn thy back on Satan suggestions. Oh! that thou could be revailed upon to lift up thy head above e world, that so thy salvation might dry nigh indeed.

It is less substantial than many a dream

Now to conclude, let me on more beseech thee to hearken to that conraging invitation, which is sometime ounded in the secret of thy soul, " Cop up hither, and I will show thee the bridgethe Lamb's wife." Come up, is here the yful sound; and even the spirit and the he say Come : and indeed he that will com may come : yea verily, may come : and he improves the strength given, all the wers of earth, and of the infernal host cannot hinder them?) are feeding on serpent's food; which was denounced by the lip of Truth to be dust, and that all the days of his life. And I also declare, under a feeling sense of Divine authority, that nothing better shall be the food, to all eternity, of such as spend all

Although we cannot by the exercise of human reason lay open the plans and decrees of the Deity, or investigate the hidden system by which he rules the natural and moral worlds, yet we may, without incurring the charge of impiety or presumption, account for many things upon principles of reason and philosophy, which have often been superstitiously ascribed to Divine agency. Phenomena from natural cause have frequently been taken for omens and prodigies, and astonishment and terror have been excited by the appearance of things simple in themselves; natural effects following a natural cause. Faith in the doctrine of signs and omens, have destroyed the happiness, and poisoned the cup of life in many an honest mind—the accidental breaking of a glass—an unusual strange noise, or an uncommon but idle dream, has often filled the mind with painful forebodings and been considered as the premonitory sign of death, or some dismal destiny. An eclipse in old times would throw whole nations of people into consternation, and the appearance of a comet excited terror and dismay, and was regarded as the messenger of Divine wrath. Those things now are familiarized to the understanding, and their causes are laid open by the researches of human reason. Ignorance and superstition have, in a great measure, surrendered their empire over the human intellect, and science and the diffusion of knowledge, like the rays of the sun, are scattering away the mists of error that once involved the human mind in darkness. The trammels which the unguarded hand of education has imposed upon us are hard to shake off, and the wrong impression received in infancy can rarely be effaced by any sober maxims in maturer age. Whe that has been once terrined by bugbear stories of raw head and bloody bones, of apparitions of the dead, &... an ever after, with perfect self-possession face the scenes where these are said to home their nocturnal vigils. Parents who have the happiness of their offspring at heart, cannot be too watchful over their infant minds, to guard against the introduction of error and falsehood. Evil, in the germ. may be easily checked, but if suffered to shoot into luxuriant growth is rarely to be controulled. Our common conversation should, therefore, be very guarded, lest we nadvertently instil into the young and tender mind improper ideas. The absurd doctrines of ghosts and omens should never be countenanced in the presence of children, and due care should be taken how we ascribe certain evils to the Divine agency -Evils and calamities fall to our lot accordnear. Thou must ere long, appear before if the proximate cause is not immediately visible, some ignorantly imagine them to MATRIMONY has its advocates and its nemies-after all it's a good thing, if not abused. True you may stumble upon a oad partner, and that will be bad enough. but you may meet with misfortunes in any course of life-the world is full of themthe best possible rule is, if you want to make a good wife-be a good husband. you would have an indulgent husband, be tender, forbearing and affectionate wife .-In more than half the cases of unhappy matches the truth is, that there is much fault on both sides There is a maxim in common life, "mend your own manners, and your neighbours will mend thejrs."-It applies to matrimony as well as to intercourse in general.

THE GOOD WIFE.

The good wife is one, who, ever mindful of the solemn contract which she has entered into, is strictly and conscientiouly virtuous, constant and strictly and conscientionly virtuous, constant and faithful to her hasband; chaste, pure and unble mished in every thought, word and deed; she is humble and modest, from reason and conviction; submissive from choice, and obedient from inclination, what she acquires by love and tenderness, she preserves by prudence and discretion; she makes it her business to serve, and her pleasure to make it her business to serve, and her pleasure to makes it her business to serve, and her pleasure to oblige her husband; as conscious that every thing which promotes his happiness must in the end contribute to her own; her tenderness relieves his contribute to her own; her affection softens his distract her agent and of the infernal host/cannot hinder ago been kindly visited, and tenderly invited by the Lord, to come and see, how good he is; and who have even tasted in a despect of the sweetness of his love, who are yet far behind hand with their day's work,—are halting, doubting, (may it not offend)

THE GOOD HUNBAND.

THE GOOD HUNBAND.

The good husband is one, who wedded not by interest but by choice, is constant as well from inclination as from principle; he treats his wife with delicacy as a woman, with tenderness on a friend; he attributes her follies to her weakness, her imprudence to her inadveriency; he passes them over therefore with good nature, and pardons them with indulgence; all his care and industry are employed for her welfare, all his strength and powers are exerted for her support and protection; he is more anxious to preserve his own charact—and reputation, because her's is blended with it lastly, the good husband is pious and seligious, that he may unim—te her faith by his practice, and enforce the precepts of Christianity by his now example; that as they join to promote each other's happiness in his world, they may unite together in one sternal juy and felicity in that which is to come.

COLLEGIANTA.

THE PET LAMB. In the first settling of Nottingham, in Chester county, Pennsylvanis, a family had raised a lamb, in and about the Louse, which became the play fellow of their daughter, then about three or four years of age. One day, while the parents were too busy to be very attentive to the child, she and the lamb strayed into the woods and were lost. After some time the fumily and neighborhood were alarmed, and went in search of them, but for many hours to no purpose, their anxiety being greatly increased, by the frequent howling of the wolves which were then very numerous; at length the child was found asleep and unhurt, and near it some of the bones of the lamb. She told them, that the naughty dogs, meaning the wolves, had killed and eaten the lamb. The woman, whose life, when a child, was thus providentially saved, died about the year 1797, in the same neighborhood where she had always resided.

"I rongor it," said Sam Shambles to his customer whom he had promised a round of beef for dinner-" I forgot it "-What could be said more? the man had to go without his dinner but he changed his custom. I forgot it, says the man who has promised to pay a bill on a certain dayhe creditor was disappointed, but nothing could be done, the man forgot it. I forgot it, says the mechanic who has neglected a seco of work that ought to have been done. forgot it. Heaven preserve us from these forgetful fellows-they turn all our calculations upside down, and make us as unfaithful to our promises as they are themselves. But hark ye! you have no business to make promise if you can't remember to fulfi! it. lease to bear that in mind-fer people ought not to suffer for your carelessness.

A GOOD CHARACTER is, to a young man, what a firm foundation is to the artist who purposes to erect a dwelling on it, he can build with safety, and as all who behold it will have confidence in its solidity, a help-ing hand will never be wanted. But let a single part of this be defective and you must go on at a hazard, amid doubtings and distrust, and ten to one but it will tumble down at last and mingle all that was built on it in ruins. Without a good of poverty is a curse-with it, it is scarcely an evil. Happiness cannot exist where good character is not; where it is, it always is a frequent visitor if not a constant guest. All that is bright in the hope of youth; all that is calm and blisaful in the sober scenes of life; all that is soothing in the vale of years, centres in, and is derived from a good character Therefore acquire this, as the first and most valuable earthly good.

I have perused most of the periodical publications now in circulation among us, and none of them, in my humble opinion, appear to contain so much simple fact, and plain truth, as a religious work called "The Reformer." Nothing but what is authenticated and founded on truth and sound reason is admitted into its columns: no dry, uninteresting disquisitions, talative to the why's, who's, wherefore's of sec arian animosities, and prediliction: no specul tive opinions, in order to support any particular sect, or party, or to build up the kingdom of Anti-Christ, all of which only tend to engender strife, and hinder the promultion of the Everlasting truth, as it is in J. sus.

I have attentively perused all the numbers of said lit le useful work, from the 1st of January, 1820, to the present month, and I would recommend the perusal of them to all serious enquiring minds, who wish to have correct views of the present degenerate and retrograde state of Christendom. FOR THE SATURDAY EVENING POST.

It was a hard though a short struggle My opponent possessed too much " of Ma jor Longbow's muscle," and in spite of my exertions and the cheers of my play-fel lows, I was prostrated at his feet; half choked with dust and sorely bruised, I attemuted to rise ; but the victor had no idea of letting me come off so cheaply; a well aimed blow levelled me again, and his venge ful ire would soon have finished me, when a cry of " fair play ! let him up !" arrested his progress, and I was borne by my little fireservers from the field of action. It was the moment of childish despair, and I thought them the sweetest sounds I had ever heard. As I grow older, every instance of oppression recalls them with redoubled force to my memory. When ,l see a man who has been unfortunate in business, shrinking from the unkinduess of a cruel world, drawn to the earth by accumulated troubles, and trampled upon by those who had joved in his prosperity, I canno help saving, it is base to strike the fallen, " Fair fluy, let him uf." When I see a young man who has dared to follow the impulse of reuson; who lays aside the tutelage of his infancy; who adventures to think for himself, and worship his God according to the dictates of his conscience : When I see him slandered, abused by the intrigues of officious relations, alienated from the heart of a beloved parent, exiled from the home of his earliest affections and thrown into the chilling atmosphere of neglected poverty; I ask, is he a christian. who would break the bruised reed? Why prostrute the tree thou hast planted? " Let Aim up." When I see a man of noble mind, beguiled by one, whose "tongue drops manna and can make the worse appear the better reason;" When I see him (too late convinced) writhing on the treacherous book, vet fearful to release himself from bords his soul abhors, lest he be wounded deter in the struggle : I say poor man! experience will be dearly bought; strive to break from the shameful toils, the fiend will feel his hold is slight and through a show of mercy, "Let you ut." "A little learning is a dangerous thing,"
And when accompanied by assurance and self-conceit, cannot fail to excite the ridicule and censure of the world.

No constitutional goodness, no acquired knowledge, can supply the absence of wisdom and modesty. The assertion of the poet is complete'y verified in a few novices f the present day, who have but a short time since passed the threshold of infancy who fancy they have arrived at a state of manhood, and who suppose they have a right (by violating the laws of good breed ing) to take up, even in the company of ladies, every word that does not quite accord with deir superior taste and judgments.

But they must sooner or later learn, that all their imaginary or real acquirements unattended by common politeness and good manners, will avail nothing.

Extraordinary interpodition of Providence Extraordinary interposition of Providence During the first Circuit of Mr. Justice Holroys an incident occurred, which as it is highly interesting in itself, and serves in an eminent degree display the interposition of Providence, we present to our readers. The prisoner who was peasant, was accused of the murder of his neighbour, who was a farmer; the usual evidence we brought forward on these occasions, as to the heating critical struggles. As, but the meet that could peasant, was accused or the murier or in mergin-hour, who was a farmer; the usual evidence was brought forward on these occasions, as to the hear-ing crica, struggles, &c. but the most that could be alduced was presumptive rather than convincing —the body had been found in a rut, with the neck, arma, and legs broken, by a plough man who was accustomed to toil soon after day-break, and who supposed with many others, he had been run over by some cart or waggon. The deceased was known to have had some quarref with the prisoner, and the prisoner was heard to utter some indistinct declarations of revenge; suspicion, consequently fixed on him, and he was now 'arraigned for the crime. When called on for his defence, he stout-ly denied the charge, and the Judge proceeded to som up the evidence, making some observation on the slight and unsatisfactory nature of the testi-mony adduced: he had nearly concluded when a woman came into the crowded part of the Court and asted what they were doing there—some one woman came into the crowded part of the Couri and asked what they were doing there—some one repired, trying a man for the murder of Johnson. Indeed," said she "I know something about that." Judge Holroyd, while this was passing felt annoyed at the interruption, and called "si-lence," which not being attended to, he asked what was the matter, and was informed, it was necessioned by the entrance of a woman who declared she knew something of the murder of Johnson. He then women the continued of the murder of the high the tale she told was very simple. She had been at a neighbouring merry-making the night of the murder, and had staid late; it was some fields distance from Johnson's to the house of her friends, and she had to pass thro'the field in which the body was found, in her way home. As she came through was found, in her way home. As she came through this field, she heard a noise as of men fighting she perceived a tall man in a smock frock, bendi over him; but the night being dark and lowering the could not discern his features; the figure the ground groaned heavily, and the man the ground groaned heavily, and the man is the fracts waisal sill each struggle subsided, and then took the body to a neighbouring nromber gate and leaving it thereon, broke the neck, arms and legs, and laid it in the rut and disappeared.—"Woman," asid the Judge, "look round the Court and see if you can recognize the man who did this." She gazed around, but her eye fell with no power of recognizing either and the rejection of the provision either on the rejection of the provision of the second of the The gazed around, but her eye fell with no power of recognition either on the prisoner, or on any other individual,—I cannot," said she "the night was too dark to see his face so as to remember it again. But, my Lord, were I to hear him speak, I should know his voice instantly, it was so remarkable." A pause ensued—the Judge sat as it were hesitating between strict justice and mercy—at length he spoke as follows: "All that we are bound to do has been done, it is not in the power of any hesitating between strict justice and mercy—at length he spoke as follows: "All that we are bound to do has been done, it is not in the power of any of our laws to make any man speak to his own cendemnation? The testimony of this woman hears the artlesaness of truth, but where the life of a fellow creature is concerned, we!"—He had proceeded thus far, when the prisoner, looking up, ejaculated, "O my Lord"—The effect on the wo-man was like an electric shock, she trembled from head to foot and turned decide rate, she attempt head to foot, and turned deadly pale, she attempted to speak, but could not Judge Holroyd continued, "It is evident from the terrifying effect of the three words just spoken, the prisoner at the bar perpetrated the crime imputed to him, and I should neglect one of the strongest interpositions of Providence I ever met with, or read of, could I for an instant hesitate in forming my opinion as to the guilt of this self-convicted murderer." The what was termed Judge Holroyd's maides Circuit. on which occasion it seems the Judges make it a rule (if possible) not to take away life, and in con-sequence of some exertions on his part, the pri-'s sentence was mitigated into transportati for life .- Cord paper.

On the tof the 8th the boat struck a sawyer, which cher bow, when she sunk and was entirely together with all ther cargo, and between 20. 30 lives. My escape was rather more miracuthan any one of which I know; we were about sards from the shore when we struck, but the infloated further into the stream. We haddobserved a boat below, that sunk about than any one of which i know; we were about sards from the shore when we struck, but the infloated further into the stream. We haddobserved a boat below, that sunk about the angle of the despire we passed up the river, that was known to the upper deck, from which circumstee I hoped ours would sink in lower; I held to the wreck, thinking it would not go entirelinder water; but finding my mistake. I climbup the flag staff, which was higher than any to fte boat, and when that went under water are myself up as entirely lost, not being able swim. I struggled in the water in despair, till my struggles I was raised to the surface of the ter, and caught hold on a part of the covering he upper deck which was made of boards and this time had floated lone from the boat. After ittle respite, I was able to get on it. Exhausted strength, and covered by the almost frozen was. FOREIGN SUMMARY.

Since our last summary was penned ve read the speech of the King of England, at the opening of Parliament, Feb 4th. This document had been anticipated with uncommon anxiety, under the expectation that it would throw light upon the actual state and prospects of the political retations of Europe—and especially that it would furnish probable ground for the formation of correct opinions with respect to the attitude the British nation would assome in reference to the conflicting in-terests of her neighbors on the continent. But like all the addresses from the same source, it deals too much in generals, and is too common place in its tenor, to be the ground work of any rational calculation.

It is, however, gratifying to all who wish well to the cause of political liberty and national freedom, to find that "his Majesty declined being party to any pro-ceedings at Verona, which could be deemed an interference in the internal concerns of Spain, on the part of Foreign Powers;" and those who regard passing events with christian views and feelings, must rejoice in the assurance that "his Majesty has used and continues to use his most anxious andeavours and good offices, to allay the irritation unhappily subtisting between the French and Spanish Governments; and to avert, if possible, the calamity of war be-tween France and Spain.

These declarations, however, do not indicate the real opinion of the British Goremment as to the probable result of the present hostile appearances; not the part she will act, in case her mediatorial efforts should prove abortive. After all, in reference to this last point, the royal Speech is rendered more important by its omissions, than by any thing appearing on the face of its inasmuch as it is without the expression of a confident hope, that whatever may be the course of events on the continent, the British Nation will be continued in the enjoyment of peace.

This has been of late years an ingredient in addressing from the throne and the omission of it on the present occasion, argues some doubt at least, upon the subject, if not a probability that the enjoyment of this blessing will be hazarded by the necessity of throwing the weight of her influence and her arms on the side of Spain This result is, moreover, rendered more probable, by the decided testimony which s understood to have been borne by the first messenger of the Crown, to the sig-nal "moderation and innocence," with which the Spanish Revolution has been thus far conducted-by the tone of the de bates to which the Speech gave occasion; and by the singular unanimity of feeling and opinion which seem to actuate, in rela tion to this subject, the British Parliament and people.

The Address of the French Chamber of Peers, to the King, breathes the same belligerent spirit as the Speech to which it is an answer; and is characterized by the same infatuated and mad determination to plunge the nation into an unhoiy war. It would seem that the Government is acting in opposition to the wishes and interests of the people—whose dissatiafaction has been loudly and unequivocally ex-

The latest intelligence from Europe is contained in London papers of the 5th of Branch at Eastern March, and Liverpool of the 7th. It is Do at Fredericktown not as desirous as was anticipated. Nego tiations were still pending under the mediation of England, but, judging from the heightened and desperate revolution manifested on both sides, with little hope of success. The dreadful note of prepara-tion every where resounded, and every thing indicated the approach of the crisis. One circumstance had occurred rather nauspicious to the cause of Spain. Ferdinand had refused his sanction to a decree of the Cortes, providing for the removal of the Court, in the event of the approach of the enemy rendering it necessary-and had, by so doing, given too much ground for the suspicion that he was under the influence of the French.

In order to give the most correct view of the state of the negotiations up to the atest dates, we subjoin the following remarks from Boll's Weekly Messenger; an English paper, whose political views, foreign and domestic, are generally, able, judicious and impartial.

ance of this proposal would be, in race, as a preliminary, that the French King should withdraw his army from the Spanish frontier. It is not consistent with the dignity and independence of the Spanish Government to entertain this proposal of England upon any other ground. It would have the air of submission to the Government and Armies of France.

The above, we believe, will be found to be the correct substance of the dispatches arrived within the week from Spain. The dispatches from France are a mere repetition of the above;—and France are a mere repetition of the above;—and Moyamensing.

The above, we believe, will be found to be the correct substance of the dispatches arrived within the week from Spain. The dispatches from France are a mere repetition of the above;—an announcement to the English government, that the French Government cannot accede to such a proposal,—that it would be tantamount to an immediate abandonment of its awn just pretensions, and would surrender the cause of the Spanish Loyalists, and the fair advantage of France in having such an auxiliary, to the railing faction in having such an auxiliary, to the ruling faction in Spain.—That the condition of France moreover, will not admit of the assent of her Government to will not admit of the assent of her Government to such an extravagant proposal.

"Such, therefore, is the state, at the time we are writing, of this important question,—Spain requiring the withdrawing the armies as a preliminary step to all review upon her part of the Constitution of 1812, with the purpose of determining whether her Cortes can consent to the institution of a chamber of Nobility; whilst France decidedly rejects this proposal to withdraw her forces. Upon the part of Great Britain, the mediation still continues, and the chance of preserving peace is therefore now reduced to this question. Whether the British Ministers can find apy middle point to which both parties may accede? France, as we understand, is willing to suspend France, as we understand, is willing to suspend the march of her troops from Bayoune that she may afford time to Spain for this reconsideration; but France will not consent either to withdraw her prance will not consent either to windraw her army, or to stop its further re-inforcement and more full equipment.

"In the-mean time both England and America are on the alert, (we mean a certain de-acription of merchants and traders in both) to scription of merchants and traders in both) to be ready for the commencement of hostilities, and to take letters of marque from the Spanish Government. In Liverpool, London, and other ports, it is notorious, that forty, fifty, or an hundred ships are hourly waiting for this event, and that the seas will be covered with privateers against France, in the moment that was is doclar

Remedy for the Piles.

THE Medicine now offered to the public is on which has been fully subjected to the infallible test of experience, and in every instance where has been fairly tried, it has been attended with the most complete success. In some of the cases the patients had been labouring under this disease for years, and during that period had received the best medical advice, and had even undergone: best medical advice, and had even undergone a painful surgical operation without permanent ad-vantage. It is not like those usually advertised, effered as an infallible cure for a long catalogue of diseases, but those afflicted with this complaint, for which alone it is recommended, may rely with confidence upon obtaining relief even in its worse forms in a short time, and they themselves are the best judges of the importance of such a remedy Price 50 cents per box; (with directions) which generally effects a cure. Massas, Eurrass,—I esteniate upon your reception of this effusion, and obtrusion upon your delivareactions, to become confounded and automisted at my rustic notions of good living.

You must know, Messas, Printers, that I am in the habit of weekly perusing your interesting and amusing paper, edited by you, called the "Saturday Evening Past;" but some time has elapsed, since I had the pleasure of coaling an article denominated an "enignatical dinner". Week after week have impererptibly passed away in pleasing anticipations of having the infinite gratification of possessing the solution of the three different courses named.

ent courses named. This delusion, I now affirm has vanished, and This delusion, I now affirm has vanished, and I do entertain a strong presentment, that your would be prolific genius and correspondent had acted the placer st. and culted from various sources, those different appellations, descriptive of an ambiguous epicurean redundancy, fondly flattering his perioranism incapacity, that he should either cramp the genius of some, and excite the imitation of others, and by that stratagem elicit what he could not fathom himself, namely the exact denomination of the different articles which would constitute the entertainment proposed for acoustions.

Now, no longer expecting to be gratified from a Philadelphia channel, and finding that a number of my female friends of this delectable Pitt, whose or my tends of this detection Fig., whose cuclosity have arisen to the highest summit of Grants-Hill's' expectation and anxiety, I was determined to exercise my inquisitive faculty, and furnish you, and through you, the Philadelphian geniry, what I humbly apprehend to be the compound of the heterogenous mass, calculated to grainly the optices, offactory sensibility, and sensu-ality of an optionesin appetite.
